Did you know that...

...on this spacious and breezy hill can be found seven Calvary chapels and the Emperor Franz Joseph Jubilee Fountain. Towards the end of the 17th century, the Kraus von Sala family had the ruined walls of the medieval castle that stood on this site demolished and constructed in its place a Calvary mount with seven chapels. The only remaining epic of the castle that gives some idea of its former grandeur is one of its towers, the Burggrafenturm, which has been converted to a double chapel. To mark the 60th anniversary in 1908 of the ascents of the Emperor Franz Joseph I to the throne of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the citizens of Kastelruth built the Jubilee Fountain in a central spot and commissioned Eduard Burgauner to decorate it. For political reasons after the First World War, the portrait of the Emperor was painted over and thus covered up, but it was restored during the most recent renovation of the fountain. At the same time as the fountain was built, the whole of the hill top was converted to a leisure area with benches and pathways.

Loop-trail of the Calvary hill

The set-off point is the historic village square of Kastelruth. From here, you pass under the right archway of today's town hall, former residence of the Counts of Kraus, towards the Calvary hill. The path leads past two chapels to the bowling square. At the end of the pathway you will reach the so-called „Infang“, a truly idyllic place. After circling the Calvary hill and admiring the view over the village with its high church tower and Schlern mountain in the background, return to the village square.
